At a glance this house is sympathetically Georgian, but upon second thought it betrays a modern French tendency. It has an element of both: enough of the one to give it solidity, sufficient of the other to assure it grace. The wrought-iron railing which passes across the facade on a line with the drawing room windows is an unusual feature, intelligently introduced. In its design it is individually attractive, and as an element of the general composition it successfully bridges over the transition from stone to brick. The Bachelor Apartment House, which is but just completed, is perhaps more notable as a product of the age than for its architectural pretension. It presents an orderly facade of selected brick and stone and shows on its roof a garden of attractive size and design. Within it is admirably planned and almost brilliantly adapted for its purpose, but its chief value lies in the fact that it meets adequately the requirements of local conditions. A few words at least should be said of the plans and design made by these architects for the new Masonic Temple, which is to be erected in Washington in the near future, not only because it is, up to the present time, one of the most ambitious of their accomplishments, but also because it proves them capable of handling large problems as well as small, and demonstrates the fact that they are not restricted to a single formula....
